HABITS OF THE SEAL. Mr. Condert Tells How the Mother Seeks

Food for Her Offspring. Paris, May 5 .- Mr. F. R. Coudert, of counsel for the United States, continued his argument before the Behring sea tribanal of arbitration to-day. Mr. Condert read from the American case to show the habits of the seals-that if a mother seal was killed her pup must inevitably perish by starvation, as the seal mothers would nurse only their own pups. The porther of the American case read by Mr. Condert also showed that, necessarily, after a few days of nursing her pup the cow is compelled to seek food in order to provide sufficient nourishment for her offspring; that she leaves the pup on the rockery and goes into the sea, these excursions lengthening as the pup gets older. The portion read also showed that fish were very scarce in the waters adjacent to the rookeries, and this necessitated the cow going many miles in search of her food, and that they undoubtedly go from one hundred to two hundred miles from the rookeries on these feeding excursions, a fact borne out by the testimony of many experienced sealers. Mr. Condert went on to say that since the nursing mothers traveled this distance seaward to seek food, returning after getting the food, it was difficult to speak patiently of limit would be sufficient for the protection of the female seals. Mr. Condert next read and discussed that portion of the American case relating to the methods employed in taking the seals at the Pribyloff islands, and the results of these practices upon the herd. He read to the effect that a berd of seals is as capable of being driven, separated and counted, as a herd of cattle on the plains, in fact, so much resembling the latter, in timidity of the females and ferocity of the males, that, according to the evidence of one witness, "they are as controlable and amenable to good management upon the islands as sheep and cattle," and that this power of domestication has made it possible to discriminate most carefully between the classes of seals killed and to enforce rules and regulations for the general management of the

the British proposal that a twenty-mile

Baron De Courcel, president of the tribunal, inquired whether the branding of seals was practiced.

Mr. Coudert replied that he presumed it was not. What good would it be? he asked. It would be no protection against-pelagic maranders, who, on American soil, would be hanged without trial. There was no difference, Mr. Condert continued, between seals going to the sea for food and cattle going out on the prairies for food. in reply to Lord Hannen, one of the British arbitrators, Mr. Condert prefaced his examination of the management of the seal islands with an argument in which he contended that the arbitrators could not make any regulations as to Behring sea conditional as to what would be done on the islands owned by the United States. The United States would not allow anybody to interfere with the management of the property of the United States.

Mr. Condert then went on to prove that the regulations in force on the Pribyloff islands provided every possible precantion for the preservation of the seals. Dogs were not allowed on the islands, and even smoking was forbidden. This latter statement caused a good deal of merriment and banter on the part of the members of the tribunal and the counsel present.

The hearing was not so interesting in the afternoon as in the forenoon. Mr. Condert asserted that pelagie sealing had not lessened since the modus vivendi was agreed upon between Great Britain and the United States. The pelagic seal hunters now catch the seal in the ocean outside the Behring sea where they found the chase equally profitable. Consequently it was necessary to establish regulations as to seal hunting in the North l'acific coast and so stamp out pelagic sealing.

ARMY BILL NEARING A VOTE. Members Too Excited Yesterday to Listen to

Speeches-Dickering for Support. BERLIN, May 5 .- The excitement at the Reichstag to-day surpassed anything witnessed there since the last hours before the dissolution on the septennate, in 1887. The government was scurrying hither and thither for votes on the army bill, and the Deputies were too uneasy to remain in the House. The corridors and lobby were thronged with groups in eager conversation. The speakers talked toempty benches. Freiherr Von Huene did not relax his efforts to help the Chancellor, despite the action of his party caucus. He appeared in the lobby late in the afternoon, holding in his hand the copy of a new amendment proposed by Major Hinze, the dissident Radical. At once he was the center of a group of Conservative Deputies. upon whom he exhausted his eloquence to secure their support of a clause making a mandatory provision for the two-year term for all branches of the service. The amendment was not received enthusiastically by the Conservatives. A few minutes later Dr. Von Bætticher bastened into the lobby with a large group of Conservatives in tow. He, too, was trying to make converts to the Hinze amendment, As he passed with his following, Herr Von Coscielski, leader of the Poles, remarked

"There goes Betticher offering the bill for sale to the highest bidder. The bitterness of the opposition Clericals increases hourly. The leader of the Ba-Varian Ciericals said this afternoon that if the bill should be passed with the assistance of the Pruse an Clericals the Bavarian members would summon a caucus in Regensburg. They would there declare their secession from the Clerical party and establish a political organization of Bavarian Clericals, who would co-operate with the Wurtemburgers, Alsatians, Westphalians, Rhinelanders and triendly Prussians to re-Bist the overreaching projects of militarism. Editor Sigel, the Munich Prussian hater, declares in his Vaterland that Prussia is laying up trouble for herself by her reckless insistence in the matter of the army bill. Her relations to Bavaria and others o the federal states, he says, have yet to stand the ordeal of tire. Few persons could doubt, in view of her present course, that the next war would be intended to make her the supreme ruler of Germany. Indeed, Germany had aiready become Prussia. If the next war should result in absolute victory for Germany, Bavaria would then be

This evening it was said the division on the bill will probably be taken on Monday. The government, apparently, is gaining strength, although the event of the vote is still uncertain. Three Alsatians, who had proclaimed their intention to oppose the compromise, have left the city for home, and will not return antil after the division. Major Hinze's proposal to legalize the two-year term has been approved by the government after Chancellor Von Caprivi had received positive assurances that thirty Radicals would support the Huene compromise thus amended.

THE HOME-RULE BILL. All Instructions to the Committee Ruled Out of Order Except One.

LONDON, May 5,-In the House of Commens to-day the Rt. Hon. W. L. Jackson, who succeeded Mr. Balfour as Chief Secretary for Ireland in Lord Salisbury's administration, asked whether the government would print and circulate forthwith the amendments to the financial clauses of the Irish home-rale bill.

Prime Minister Gladstone replied that when the House committee should reach that stage of the home-rule bill the government intended to move to postpone the financial clauses.

The Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain-Does the government propose any changes

Mr. Gladstone-None at present. Mr. Chamberlain-Does the government adhere to the financial clauses as they

Mr. Gladstone-I can't say. [Laughter.] For instance, the possible increase of the excise must be regarded. It is merely the assertion of a principle of Ireland's liability to certain charges. The government has not intended to depart from the proposal to retain the customs duties. The initial clauses will remain open. The Rt. Hon. A. J. Balfour asked the Speaker to state his views regarding the thirteen instructions to the committee regarding the home-rule bill, which were standing on the paper. The Speaker declared that the instructions were all out of order, excepting that offered by Mr. T. Gibson Bowles, Conservative member for Kingslynn, proposing that the home-rule bill should be separated and the part relating to Irish representation in imperial Parliament made a distinct bill. The rejection of the instructions was a great surprise to the House. Most of the thirteen had been prepared by the most practiced parliamentarians and there had been no general doubt as to their being in

Immediately after the Speaker made his declaration, the opposition met in a committee room to decide upon a united course of action. Colonel Saunderson, the Ulster Loyalist, presided, and Mr. Balfour, Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Randolph Churchill did most of the talking. As soon as a decision was reached the members returned to their places. Mr. Chamberlain gave notice that, on Monday, he would ask Mr. Gladstone whether or not the government intended to adhere to Clause 9 of the homerule bill. This clause concerns Irish representation at Westminster, to be reduced to eighty members by the bill as it stands, but to be left intact, or with 103 members according to the Parnellite amendment. Sir Charles Ditke, Radical, moved that the power of appointing county magistrates be transferred from the Lords to the Lords Lientenants. The motion was carried by a vote of 208 to 210.

AIMS OF CUBANS.

They Hope to Secure Self-Government it Accordance with American Progress. KEY WEST, Fla., May 5 .- Delegate Marti, the acknowledged head of the Cuban revolutionary movement in this country, speaking of the situation in Cuba, said: "This movement was not instigated by the party. The men in it are members of the party acting independently. Whether it was forced by Spanish surveillance or not, '18 not known, but if Cuba follows, the party is ready to indorse the step and give it all the aid possible.'

"What connection has the present movement with your party?" "I suppose that different columns of the army were assigned to meet at a certain time and place, and that one column sud denly faced or was confronted with the necessity of meeting an emergency without time to consuit the remaining bodies. That is the connection the party has with this movement."

"What are the purposes of the party and causes of its existence?" "The Cuban revolutionary party exists not in a blind wish for independence or to promote at the end of the nineteenth century a war or invasion in an unwilling country, nor to replace the Spanish colony with a merely nominal, self-devouring republic. The Cuban character is very difierent from what superficial judges believe. Unavoidable errors in the former unprepared revolution was the first step which placed the slave as a free man beside his master, and in which the representative classes failed to inspire themselves with the spirit of the moment, and acted with confusion. Cubans have been well trained aiready for democracy by ten years of unaided war. Twenty five years of exile and self-support in active participation in the allairs of governments having constitutional liberty prepare them for self-government. The party will not disturb the country without a view to its wishes; therefore we have organized no expeditions. After fourteen years of diligent effort of the Cubans to secure a minimum amount of home rule with the result of two representatives in two hundred, organization became necessary. An army of Spanish employes rale the island. As conquerers all fortunes are in the hands of the Spanish, and many vicesare encouraged. Cuba's commerce with Spain is obligatory and exclusive. Gold-Cure Keeley's Damage Suit, LONDON, May 5. - The Laucet, the authoritative British medical publication, some time ago printed an article on the bichloride of gold treatment for drunkenness invented by Dr. Keeley, of Dwight, Ill. When Dr. Keeley saw the article he decided that it was libelous, and instructed counsel to bring an action for damages against the Lancet. The case has been in court for some time, and to-day came before the Queen's Beach division of her Maiesty's High Court of Justice on an appeal made by the defendant against an order that had been issued directing the appointment of a commission to go to Chicago to examine Dr. Keeley. After listening to the arguments in support of and against the appeal, the court adjourned the case to enable Dr. Keeley's counsel to produce from America certificates as to his client's merits and proficiency.

Revolution in Nicaragua. PANAMA, May 5 .- Mail advices bring the news that a revolution has broken out in Nicaragua. The movement is an outcome of the hostility entertained by the eastern

The government forces are being massed at the frontier in preparation for a final movement against the comparatively small force under the rebel leadership.

PHILADELPHIA, May 5. - The projectors of the Christian Centennial at Jerusalem in 1900, the chief mover in which is Coi. Josse E. Peyton, met in historic Carpenter's Hall yesterday. Rev. H. C. McCook, D. D., presided, and George Gluyas Mercer acted as secretary. Colonel Peyton stated the object of the centennial to be a congress of all nations and to mark the nineteen-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Christ. He further said that a committee would prepare resolutions and present them for adoption at a public meeting to be held in front of Independence Hall on July 4. The resolutions will be sent to Chicago for consideration by the Parliament of Religions at the world's fair. Chairman McCook said a union of Mohammedans, Israelites and Christians would be a remarkable thing to accomplish, but if it could be done it would be a most auspicious opening of the twentieth century.

RUBBER FROM CRUDE OIL. Recent Important Discovery Which Has Been Kept a Secret. Baltimore Manufacturers' Record.

A most unique manufacturing establishment, the only one of its kind in the world. has been in operation successfully for some months at Savannah, Ga. Here cottonseed oil is manufactured by a secret process into rubber-not a substitute, but bona fide rubber; such, at least, some of the best experts have pronounced the product of the factory to be. Nobody knows anything about what is going on maide of the factory, with the exception of a few ignorant workmen. Nobody is admitted. The bare facts alone are known that crude cottou-seed oil from the oil mill, costing about 50 cents a gallon, or about $185 per ton, is carted in in five-ton lots, and that tons or rubber, worth about $1 per pound or $2,000 per ton, are carted out and shipped to a very prominent rubber dealer and manu-

In a recent interview the discoverer of the process, who is an artist of some prominence, states that while experimenting with cotton-seed oil to produce a varish for paintings he obtained a product entirely foreign to his expectation-not a way to make varnish, but rubber. He claims that his process is so simple that it is not patentable; hence his only safeguard is in the secrecy of the process. The only information be gives is that he uses only 15 per cent, of genuine rubber to produce an article which cannot in any way be distinguishable from crude India rubber. As soon as his discovery was made he went at once to Boston, where a number of rubber experts pronounced the product genuine rubber, and would not believe that such an article could be produced by artificial means. A prominent rubber manufacturer of Boston recognized at once the value of the discovery, and took a different view from the rest, and purchased an interest in the process, and placed $30,000 at the command of the discoverer for the purpose of erecting the necessary plant. The existence and availability of the rubber trees is limited and it is doubtful if much higher prices than the present quotations would have the effect of causing a corresponding increase in the production. Artificially-planted rubber trees would require many years before they could be made to yield, and the present rubber forest is deteriorating fast. Any discoveries

HER WEAK DEFENSE.

Special to the Indianapo is Journal. FOWLER, Ind., May 5.-This was a big day in the Payne trial. The State closed its case at 10:15 o'clock this morning, the last witness being James W. Payne, the husband of the prisoner. His statement was quite lengthy and at times very touching. He recited in brief the history of his life, and coming down to his married life stated his affection for his wife and the ample provision he had made for her wants. He testified as to her strange acts on the night of the shooting. The revolver was found wrapped in paper similar to that which he bad seen her take from a wardrobe. He said he thought nothing of this until he was told next day of his wife's infidelity, and that she would be arrested for the crime. Then her suspicious conduct flashed across his mind, and he told them to look in the vault for the revolver, and it was found there. He said that till that day he had always loved his wife. He exhibited the wound to the jury, after which the State rested. The defense made a five minutes' statement and introduced a few witnesses, neighbors of Payne's, to show that they had never seen any men go into Payne's house, nor had they seen the lights grow dim or blinds put down. The last witness in the case was Nellie C. Payne, the defendant. Her statement was not much different from Mr. Payne's except that part referring to the revolver. On this the two statements did not agree She said she did not shoot her husband She was not cross-examined, and the evi

Water in the Wabash Stands Higher Than Ever Known There Before.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. VINCENNES, Ind., May 5 .- The Wabash river at this point is higher than it has ever been since 1883, in fact, the present stage has never been known but twice before within the limit of authentic record. It now measures 21 3/10 feet on the government gauge and is still rising. The country opposite the city for many miles is under water. Thousands of acres of wheat in Knox county, Indiana, and Lawrence county, Illinois, are covered. The wheat is just now jointing, which is a tender and dangerous condition. Farmers claim the entire crop, where submerged, will be killed. The cool, cloudy weather is favorable to the wheat however. All mills and factories on the river front have been shut down owing to the water having reached the furnaces. Six inches more and the basements of the wholesale houses on First street will be covered. The lavees on both sides are yet intact, but are greatly strained by the vast volume of water. The situation is alarming to-night.

"I have the honor to forward herewith an inventory of the property of this consulate belonging to the United States government. I am unable to state its present value on account of the ravages of the chinate and of insect life. These are so great that the only article in my possession which I can pronounce undamaged is the iron safe. To an American, no matter how philosophic, the conditions of life in Amoy are exasperatingly novel. Almost every wooden article is bound sooner or later to be devoured by white ants. The adult insect lays a million eggs, which hatch and forthwith begin to bore away from the light. As the grub perforates the surface of the wood it is as large as the point of a needle, so that the hole it makes is invisible to the naked eye. It grows rapidly. and by some strange chemistr, thrives upon dry wood without any moisture except what it extracts or absorbs from the atmosphere. It never stops work until it attains its full size, which is about five times that of the garden ant at home.

"Then in large groups it bores outward. producing holes which vary in size and shape from a circle a quarter of an inch in diameter to a seam six inches long. As it emerges it has wings, and behaves somewhat like a bee in hiving season. By day it moves but little, but at dask it starts for the nearest light. It is fascinated by the latter exactly as is a moth. It plunges into your lamps by millions, and in a few minutes is scorched and wingless. The nuisance is so great that it stops dinners and forces the people either to swelter in a close room or to sit in the dark. In two years I have known thirty dinner parties occasion in this consulate the dead and the living ants filled every plate and glass and covered everything and everybody in the dinning room. The next morning the servants swept out more than two bushels of dead insects. But to this trouble one gets and tried many remedies and physicians, to no good pupose. One day I read one of the Hood's Sarsaparilla books, and thought I would try a bottle of the medicine. It made so great a dif-ference in my condition that I took three bottles more and found myself perfectly well. I in the house, and I can do nothing but await the end. For this reason I am unable to state the value, or even the real condition of anything wooden in the establishment. "Minor evils are the cockroaches, which fly in these latitudes and show a strong predilection for the finger nails and toe nails of persons asleep, as well as for all kinds of bookbinding, leather goods and old papers. There are, too, several varieties of large spiders of ferocious aspect but peaceful disposition, red ants which light and fear nothing, and four or five insects or microbes which burrow into the skin and produce cutaneous troubles resembling

"The climate is unfavorable for the preservation of anything. The northeast monsoon is a perpetual gale, and in the southwest monsoon season we are constantly visited by typhoons, which are the cyclones of the far East. In addition to the high winds is the atmospheric moisture, of which we have no parallel at home. At the damp season everything leaks. The water condenses on the walls and furniture and runs to the floor in rivulets and pools. In cities like Hong Kong architects put drying rooms in the houses, where the wearing apparel is duly cooked before using for the season. I beg to suggest to the department that in books designed for this part of the world arsenic, mercury, or such ingredients as may prevent or resist the lower forms of life, animal and vegetable, should be employed in the binding and covers."

Fatal Mistake by Walters.

New York Recorder. The men who have been in the habit of patronizing the best restaurants in New York, where the waiters have been especially demonstrative on their "strike," are the very men who have made a habit of giving generous "tips." They have done this in spite of protest and under the idea that it was a good way to be sure of the best of service. Since they have seen that the waiters took the opportunity when these patrons were all dining to leave in a body, there is a determination to let the "tips" go hereafter. The waiters could not have taken a more effective way to secure the abolishment of a bad custom. Fine China-Eastman, Schleicher & Les World's Fair Excursions to Chicago Via Best
